The fear and anxiety caused by this virus affects our senior and disabled adult population the most. A lot of them have no idea who to contact for help getting essential items like food and medication. One phone call a day can provide them with information to help keep them safe and happy. Sometimes just talking to someone can provide them with a calming reassurance that someone does care and is looking out for them. Our offices are open and ready to serve the needs of those you care for during this time of uncertainty.
